COURT IS EXPECTED TO GIVE IMPORTANT DECISIONS TUESDAY

More Light May Be Shed on Anti-Trust Problem When Supreme Court Convenes Tomorrow.

Washington, Jan. 8.—With more than one hundred cases under consideration, the Supreme Court of the United States is expected to hand down many important decisions Tuesday, when it convenes after the holiday recess.

More light may be shed on the anti-trust problem by decisions in the St. Louis bridge case; the "hard coal" suit against the principal anthracite coal-carrying railroads; and the "cotton corner" case, arising out of transactions on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The validity of several federal laws may be determined. Foremost among these is the Employers' Liability law which has been under consideration by the court since last February. A second decision may be rendered regarding the validity of the "Carmack amendment" to the Interstate Commerce laws, whereby initial carriers were made liable for damages or loss of goods whether occurring on their lines or those of connecting carriers.

Several State Laws. The fate of a score or more state laws may be decided. Of these, the constitutionality of the Oregon initiative and referendum system has attracted the most attention, because the ruling of the court will be applicable to laws in nearly half the states of the union.

Foreign corporation laws of Kansas, New York, and Texas may be passed upon. Other laws under consideration are the Illinois "Service Law" for railroad employees in the state of Washington; the Missouri anti-trust law; the North Dakota drainage law; the Kansas "Black Powder" law; the New York transfer tax law; the Montana law taxing hand landrills; the North Carolina law regulating the receipt of goods by railroads; and the Arkansas law requiring railroads to pay within thirty days claims for live stock killed by trains.

CARDINALS WINNERS
IN BRILLIANT GAME

Turngmeinde Blues Were Outplayed
by Local Team in Game Saturday Night—Score 32 to 28.

After a brilliant and hard fought struggle in which both teams exerted every effort to secure the victory, the Cardinals basketball team won the honors from the Turngmeinde Blues of Chicago in the game at the rink Saturday night by the score of 32 to 28.

It was a battle which really tested the metal of the local team and they played in their best form in order to win. From the first it was evident that the game would be close. Janesville started with a dash and had a total of six points before their opponents scored. The Blues, who have a long record of victories, were not slow in learning the state of affairs and rushed on with a series of spectacular plays to secure several baskets. From then until the end of the game the outcome was in doubt although at the end of the first half the score stood 17 and 13 for the Cardinals.

The second half was as exciting as the first and the Blues scored as many points but were unable to overcome the handicap which the superior basketball-throwing of the Cardinals imposed. Jones, Hemming and Cunningham were point-men for the local team, the first two named each adding ten points to the total score. McKane and Nelson were stars for the opponents. The line-up follows: Janesville. Position. Chicago. Jones. F. G. Geland. Cunningham. F. C. Hansen. Hemming. F. C. McKane. Langdon. F. C. Nelson. Green. F. C. Mayer. Field goals: Hemming, 3; Jones, 4; McKane, 4; Cunningham, 3; Geland, 3; Nelson, 3; Green, 2; Langdon, 1; Hemming, 1. Free throws: Jones, 2; Geland, 3. Referee—Carlo.

CLASHES IN RACING
DATES NOT TO ARISE

Stewards of Grand Circuit Who Meet in New York Tomorrow To Take in Columbus and Lexington.
(Special to the Gazette.)

New York, Jan. 5.—When the stewards of the Grand Circuit met together at the Waldorf-Astoria tomorrow for their annual meeting several important matters will come up in the form of the major racing circuit for the light harness horse season of 1912. At least two applications from new clubs will be received, the Columbus matter will be threshed out and several other important subjects will be discussed.

Columbus will be welcomed back to the fold and Lexington probably will be taken in, which means that there will be no clashes over dates this year. Indianapolis and Goshen, which were included in the circuit last year, will be dropped. Pittsburgh, which has not had professional racing in more than a quarter of a century, would like to see the Grand Circuit spread at Brant's Island next fall. The stewards seem to think well of the proposal and it is regarded as highly probable that Pittsburgh may be taken in. Salem, N. H., which has in Rockingham Park one of the finest racing plants in the country, also is expected to apply for membership, but as the racing game has not prospered in New England lately it is former years it is doubtful if Salem is allotted dates.

Of course, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, the Detroit State Fair Association, North Randall, Fort Erie, Syracuse, Readville and Hartford will remain as solid as ever, and meetings at about the same time as last year will be held. Kalamazoo probably will be selected to open the circuit, with Grand Rapids, Detroit and Hartford following in the order named.

WALTER CAMP

ATTACKS RULES.
Chicago, Ill.—Attacking the present football code as contradictory and written by men twenty years behind the times, Frank W. Cavanaugh, head coach of the Dartmouth eleven, threw the gauntlet square in the face of Walter Camp, the famous rules expert.

"What football needs at the present time more than anything else," said Cavanaugh, "is not additions to the rules, but a revision of those under which the game is being played."

O. L. DICKESON

YOUNGEST RAILROAD PRESIDENT

Chicago, Ill.—From stenographer to president of an immense railroad and transportation company is the record of the last fourteen years of O. L. Dickeson. He is still a young man and is accredited with being the youngest railroad president in the world.

It was just fourteen years ago that he accepted a position as stenographer in the office of the Burlington and Quincy railroad. At the recent meeting of the directors of the White Pass and Yukon railroad he was made president and given full power to develop this important transportation system in Alaska.

Mr. Dickeson is in London on business for the road and as yet has not learned of his election, but his friends in Chicago told why they had chosen him for the position.

"Dickeson came to our road from the Burlington only a year ago," one of them said. "When he left the 'Q' he was their general inspector of transportation, and that means that he had risen mightily quickly. He became the vice-president of the Alaska road and acted under S. H. Graves, who was the president until a few weeks ago. Mr. Graves' death was responsible for the new election."

Mr. Dickeson is not a college-trained man. He attributes his success to his supreme curiosity and stick-to-it-iveness.

"He always wished to know the reason for everything," F. J. Elliot, connected with the Alaska line, said. "He began as a stenographer, and after learning all there was to that business, set himself straightway to finding out how the other railway wheels went round. And he found out, too, for he is the most tenacious man I ever have seen."

The White Pass & Yukon route lies between Skagway and White Horse, a distance of 150 miles. From a later point the company operates a steamship line to Dawson. The road was the first railroad of any size to be built in Alaska.

JANESVILLE WOMAN
PRAISES DOCTORS

SAYS UNITED DOCTORS HELPED HER MORE IN ONE MONTH
THAN ALL OTHERS IN EIGHT YEARS.

DOCTORS OF LAST RESORT.

OTHER DOCTORS OPERATED ON HER FIVE DIFFERENT TIMES
WITHOUT BENEFIT.

One of the most recent to praise the United Doctors, who have their Janesville Institute in the Hayes building, corner of Milwaukee and Main streets, is Mrs. Nellie Gleason of 109 Pearl Court, this city. Mrs. Gleason was operated on five different times by other doctors without receiving benefit before going to the United Doctors. In fact, as she says, her troubles still remained. As her letter, written for publication, will be of great interest to the sick, it is reproduced here in full. The letter is as follows:

Dear Doctors: "For the past eight years I have been quite ill with a number of ailments which made life far from enjoyable for me. I doctored with a number of doctors in this city as well as elsewhere. I was operated on five different times by different doctors and still my troubles were there just the same. Finally they told me that I couldn't be cured."

"When you opened your Institute in this city and I heard so much about the wonderful cures you were accomplishing in many difficult cases, I decided to see you as a last resort. I was so glad when you, after a careful examination, told me that I could be cured."

"It is now just one month since I have been under your care and I wish to say to you and the public that my troubles have left me. I am feeling much better and entirely free from pain and feel like a different person. You have done more for me in one month than all the other doctors have done for me in the past eight years."

"I am so grateful for what you have done for me that I want other sufferers who may be ill and suffering like I formerly used to be to know where I go for a cure."

Sincerely,

MRS. NELLIE M. GLEASON,

109 Pearl Court, Janesville, Wis.

The above is but one of hundreds of testimonials that the United Doctors receive yearly. It tells the same old story of patients being cured and benefited after all other doctors and medicines have failed to help them.

Anyone suffering from any chronic disease or ailments can do no better than to immediately consult these specialists.

Dr. Levy to lay his case before the Russian Minister of the Interior, proposing the reply. This the rabbi indignantly refused to do. "I do not think I want to set a foot in the detestable tyrannical country."

"I thought it would be interesting to test the rights of American citizens in Russia, particularly as I have a letter from the State Department, commending me to American officials abroad and written at the request of Franco."

Announcement Extraordinary!

Windows, Doors, Mouldings and All Millwork

At Less Than Mail Order House Prices

Through a change in our method of buying, we are prepared to furnish the people in and around Janesville all kinds of millwork at wholesale prices.

It means that we must carry large stocks, buy in carload quantities, and sell on a close margin of profit.

It means that Janesville will become a jobbing center.

It means that the consumer will be able to buy millwork at prices less than heretofore could be bought at wholesale.

It means that the public can buy at the same prices that mail order houses ask, thus saving the freight from Chicago to Janesville, having the privilege of inspecting what they buy before paying for it, and also of receiving a better quality of goods without any delay or the chance of a mistake when the goods are received.

All stock millwork is included in these prices and the comparisons which we set forth apply to all other items.

WHO WILL BE THE GAINER?

The extra assessment, recently completed, was expected to show an increase, and expectations are fully realized. The only man who has occasion to be supremely happy is the man responsible for bringing it about, and he is welcome to all the glory in sight.

The increase of $300,000 in the assessment roll means that Janesville will pay back taxes next year to the extent of some twelve or fifteen thousand dollars, as well as the same amount of additional taxes, and the small taxpayer will contribute his full share of the amount.

The principal duty of the state machinery is to provide money for the expense of forty commissions and the state university, and a lot of frills like the twice blinding plant. If the city of Janesville needed re-assessing every other city in the state needs it just as much, and the principal demand is the $11,000,000 tax budget to be provided for.

The growth and prosperity of a city depends upon the success of the manufacturing industries, and these are always represented by corporate interests. The employment furnished by these industries makes it possible for thirty workmen to own their homes, and in this class of men become small taxpayers. It has been claimed that the re-assessment would benefit the small property-owner, but results show that this is not the case.

The re-assessment was aimed at the manufacturing and corporate interests, and it will be found that the great bulk of the advance is apportioned to these interests. It may be good policy to burden the sources of revenue which furnish employment and make it possible for people to own homes and become small taxpayers, but it often proves disastrous.

The state of Iowa tried it thirty years ago, and as a result lost its manufacturing industries, and the loss has never been recovered. The state also lost in population, during the past ten years.

Janesville will contribute a few thousand dollars extra to add the state university in buying farms at $1,200 per acre, and to encourage the reckless loss of modern reform. If there are any other benefits to be derived from the extra assessment, they do not appear on the surface.

HENRY CLEWS' FORECAST.

"No radical action on trusts is probable during the present session of Congress, which will be chiefly devoted to active and possibly somewhat heated discussion. There is, however, some prospect of positive action on the tariff question, the greatest likelihood being a sharp cut in the steel schedules and the placing of iron on the free list. As for cotton and wool schedules, these also may be revised, but at the moment it looks as if steel would come first. The labor outlook is somewhat uncertain, but the sorry disclosures connected with the McNamara case have had a sobering effect upon labor, and are likely to result in the selection of a higher type of leadership in the future."

ture; a result which would benefit labor and capital alike by moderating class warfare and facilitating settlement of the differences between employer and employee by discussion and not force. The issues of the presidential campaign are now sharply defined, and their outcome can already be somewhat foreseen. Public sentiment is pretty definitely formed, and the chief doubt regarding the future is that of personality concerning the different candidates. This, of course, may remain unsettled until the conventions next summer, although it is not impossible that the successful nominee will be correctly guessed at in advance."

The democrats are attempting to hold a love feast in Washington today, but there is so much uncertainty about what Colonel Roosevelt will do, that they are all at sea. If the republicans should nominate the Colonel, the democrats will want to name a conservative, and if Taft is nominated either Wilson or Bryan will be in demand for a vote-catcher. Inasmuch as the republican convention comes first, the democrats will be prepared to make some lightning changes, and they have plenty of material.

"The oldest inhabitant," forty years from now, will have something to relate about the cold January of 1912. The cold wave is universal throughout the north and west. A late letter from southwestern Florida reports summer weather along the Gulf coast, but aside from this locality the political pot is the only thing boiling.

The day which will decide whether Janesville is to have the commission form of government, or not, is just two weeks away—January 23. On the following Tuesday, Madison is to vote on the same question.

The small boy that obtained a pair of skates Christmas had a direct hunch as to what to expect, evidently. And yet they say that Old Satan does not know what to give boys?

He fell upon his bended knees.

And said "Oh, Agnes, wed me please." He told her that she was his queen. The grandest girl he'd ever seen; That no one had no eyes like her's— At least, so far as he could learn. He said he'd never seen so rare And gorgeous a display of hair. He said her finger was immense And hoped she wouldn't take offense Because he mentioned such a thing. For of it poets often sing. He said he'd traveled all around And never had he heard a sound So musical as was her voice. He'd give her all he had to give; Without her he could never live. No friend was by, his speech to stay. He wound up in the usual way. She gave to him her maiden heart— It was a clench right from the start. For, while she let him have his say, He had no chance to get away. She had him lashed tight to the mast And tied and shackled hard and fast. He didn't know what he had said. He simply knew that they were wed. And when to breakfast she came down Years later in an old house gown, Without a sign of curl or rat And ready for the daily spat, He wonders how in thunder she Could have inspired the ecstasy Upon that great momentous night On which he made and won his fight. And then he perceives his brain As it has done time and again That she just had him hypnotized Until he raved and lolloped. They've done that since the world began.

There's no escape for any man Who falls beneath the mystic spell, And I guess it is just as well.

SPITE WALLS.

Ever see a "spite wall" or "spite fence?" Sometimes the thing comes about in this way:

The Jones dog loafs on the Smith lawn and entertains himself by digging perfectly good holes for imaginary coppers.

Neigherly comely is strained. Mrs. Smith suggests to Mrs. Jones that the dog be tied, and, moreover, would they kindly fix it so the Jones chickens would not care to scratch up the Smith garden?

And Mrs. Jones? She is willing to admit the dog is a trial and that the chickens show an itinerant habit not easily to be controlled. But she suggests in this connection that the Smith children are all too apt to confuse the things of thine and mine and that the Smith fence is a disreputable character and prone to wander.

So, there, now! Which will be about all until one day Smith is discovered red handed in the act of wrenching the neck of Jones' predatory rooster.

And the plot begins to thicken. Jones, coming home the same night of the rooster's assassination, protests to Smith concerning the foul manner of the disposal of his fowl.

Whereat Smith retorts concerning "dirty children." There may or may not be at this juncture a clash of fists, but anyway—

Up goes the spite fence. Now, most of us are much like Jones and Smith, and, though we may not build spite fences of boards, we build them of acts and words.

Some—the exclusive—build the fence so high the neighbors are shut out by no fault of the latter.

Some of us put up the high fences because of our grouchy dispositions or of misunderstandings or of sheer indifference.

Walls of crass selfishness! Walls of narrow prejudice! Walls of cold uncharitableness! Are we building them, perhaps unconsciously, perhaps intentionally?

Down with them! Down with the spite walls!

Wild Arabs still boil a young lamb or kid in milk. Cookery has always held high place with highly civilized man. As the saying goes: "A man thinks as he eats." One of the earliest references to great culinary skill is when the flesh of a kid was prepared so perfectly that it tasted pretty much like fresh venison.

VIRGINIA BROOKS

Chicago, Ill., backed by 500 citizens, Miss Virginia Brooks of West Hammond will invade the next Cook County Grand Jury in an effort to secure assistance in her fight to check vice in the "widest village in the world." This move comes at the suggestion of Gov. Deneen of Illinois as a result of the conference between Miss Brooks and the Governor last week.

"This move ought to be successful," said the girl reformer. "We have prepared a list of the divekeepers league with them. We are positive that the grand jury will act."

This is the climax of a crusade against vice in West Hammond led by Miss Brooks during a period of two years. During this time she has been fighting tooth and nail against the divekeepers in the village. Only recently on Sunday morning citizens hoisted in flaming colors on the bill boards as those in league with vice. The village is divided into two factions over the question and a hot fight is in store for both.

IMPORTANT WITNESS IN BEEF TRIAL. One sent out by him and said they might be genuine.

According to the evidence, the fines for over or under shipment of the beef, could not be collected in excess of 25 per cent of the amount supposed to be shipped. The fines were paid weekly to Veeder, who was in charge of the pen, and were distributed by him to those members who had not over shipped.

How Oplum is Secured. Oplum is got by cutting the capsule of the poppy flower with a notched iron instrument at sunrise, and by the next morning a drop or so of juice has oozed out. This is scraped off and saved by the grower, and after he has a vessel full of it, it is strained and dried. It takes a great many poppies to make a pound of opium, and it goes through a number of processes before it is ready for the market. In a liquid state it looks like dark strawberry jam.

Not Final Farewell.

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu once wrote a letter to her lover (whom she afterward married), concluding in the following manner: "There is no condition of life I could not have been happy in with you, no very much I liked you—I may say loved—since it is the last thing I'll ever say to you. This is telling you sincerely my greatest awakens, and now I will oblige you with a new proof of my generosity. I'll never see you more!"

INCREASE IN CITY'S ASSESSMENT IS MORE THAN FIVE MILLION

TAX COMMISSION GIVE OUT VALUATION OF TAXABLE PROPERTY.

METHODS EXPLAINED

Personal Property Increase of City Eighty-eight Per Cent. Of Real Estate Twenty-eight Per Cent.

According to figures compiled by the Tax Commission assessors just made public today, the total real and personal property valuation of Janesville is $16,499,926, an increase of $5,657,211, over the last assessment which was $10,842,715, or about thirty-four and one-half per cent. Of this total, $11,479,149 is the real estate valuation, an increase of $3,219,069 or twenty-eight per cent, over the last assessment which was $8,259,880. The personal property increase for the city is $2,328,342, approximately eighty-eight per cent. This latter amount will include a few doomsday amounts. It is interesting to note that the true value derived from the sales of real estate which have taken place in the last year after rejecting all trades, fictitious considerations and relative deals is $11,680,000; or the real estate value derived by applying the percentage of assessed to selling value of property sold for the past five years, to the assessed amount of $11,479,149. The assessors are of the opinion that any fair minded person making a comparison of the new assessed value with the sales could not ask for a total assessed value at 100 per cent to be more accurate.

The old and new assessed value of real estate by wards follows:

Ward	Assessment	Assessment
First	$1,752,175	$2,366,068
Second	1,228,995	1,697,520
Third	2,609,990	3,874,552
Fourth	1,667,929	2,398,881
Fifth	910,400	1,112,158
Total	$8,259,480	$11,479,149

In making comparisons it will be necessary to keep in mind those wards which have the most factories. Where the factory owns the building the machinery is classed as real estate.

Personal Property.

In personal property the increase is naturally more pronounced. The old and new assessments for personal property in the several wards are:

Ward	Assessment	Assessment
First	$82,295	$155,672
Second	72,854	1,020,939
Third	540,265	1,290,705
Fourth	273,282	624,895
Fifth	257,627	517,596
Total	$2,001,435	$5,020,777

The assessment has been made at full value, so property owners must expect to see their property higher than formerly. In fairness to the assessment figures it must be remembered that when a value is placed at a figure less than true value a few hundred dollars either way is not so conspicuous as when the assessment is at full value. On a full value basis a hundred or two hundred dollars difference will bring out much more profits than double the amount on a percentage basis. It is also to be remembered that the judgment of people is seldom the same on any piece of property.

The assessors have worked hard to place a value on each piece of property as near full value as it is possible to make it. In some cases they have gone above the full value mark and in other cases below. They stand ready and willing to make any and all corrections where the parties interested will take up their valuations in a fair and honest way. Property owners are urged to look over their valuations and also that of their neighbors and after making such comparisons to let the assessors know if their property is unduly valued in comparison with others. While corrections will be gladly made in case of error, this does not mean that valuations will be changed for those who appear for the express purpose of cutting their valuation irrespective of its fairness.

Assessor H. V. Cowles has submitted for the benefit of taxpayers the following information with regard to the Wisconsin tax system which is not generally known or often misrepresented.

The idea is quite common that an increase in the assessed valuation of the city means an increase in the city's share of the state and county equalization value. This, to one who is acquainted with equalization methods, is most absurd. The state and county never has and never will equalize on an assessed valuation. The state equalizes as between counties only, and at full value. In other words, if the ratio assessed to selling value of the sales of a county is seventy per cent, the assessed value is valued thirty per cent. If the county is assessed at ninety per cent the assessment is valued ten per cent. In the manner the county board equalizes as between districts by estimating the value of each district at full value or at a fixed percentage of full value.

For instance, if one city is assessed at one hundred per cent and another district at eighty per cent, twenty per cent will be added to the second district. But the equalization question is rather unimportant when we consider that eighty-five per cent of the taxes collected are used locally, so the most important question is, "How will the re-assessment effect the taxes of individual taxpayers?"

If the taxpayers will read chapter 263, laws of 1911, they will see how the adjustment is made. The new valuation is divided into the total amount of tax for the past year. A new rate thus obtained is applied to each piece of property and the new tax thus arrived at is compared with the tax actually paid. If the old tax is more than the new the property owner is credited with this difference on next year's taxes. If the amount is greater than the old, the additional amount is added to his next year's tax. If the property-owners will carefully study and consider these totals there can be but one conclusion which can be arrived at from the assessment at this time, and that is, if the assessment is increased over one third there will be an additional tax. If the increase is less than one third there will be a rebate on the old assessment.

Poormaster Seagmiller Finds That Victim of Clinton Accident Was Karl Boeck, a German.

Poormaster Seagmiller has announced that the man who was killed by the cars near Clinton during the early part of October, is Karl Boeck, who formerly lived in Germany, but who subsequently came to this country where he lived in Indianapolis and St. Paul.

Mr. Seagmiller communicated with Miss Elsie Kotter, residing in Hesse, Germany, a postcard directed to the dead man. He has just heard from Miss Kotter who says she was acquainted with the man six years ago, but did not know anything of his previous life in Germany or where his relatives lived.

She had directed her letters to him to St. Paul. Communications with St. Paul authorities revealed the fact that the man had lived there coming from Indianapolis is where he had been employed in the Wesley hospital.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

How to Be Popular.

FROM many correspondents comes the query, "How can I be popular?" "What can I do to make people like me?" "I would give anything to be popular and be liked by everybody."

This isn't vanity. It is a craving for appreciation and love, and it is very human. For we are so constituted that we need love. It is the sunshine of our spiritual life, and we need it, just as we need sunshine in our everyday life. If all our days were gray, with never a gleam of golden sunlight in them, how dreary would be the years? Yet this is practically the existence of those who live without love. They look about and see others basking in it, and their hearts go out for a share.

But it is no easy matter to give a recipe for popularity. For one thing, it is an individual problem, one that requires special study of the girl herself and of her environment. And this study must be given. And there must be patient work to overcome whatever it is that is blocking the road to popularity. The girl who is unpopular will not find it an easy task to win the way to popularity. But she can win, if she will work patiently and perseveringly; and her reward will be the sweeter and the sounder, than is the popularity of the girl who does not climb to it by any such comprehension and mastery of self.

As a beginning, the girl who is unpopular should do certain practical things. They are not the most essential, but they are helps.

She should pay particular attention to her dress. She need not dress extravagantly or expensively. But she should be sure to be always dainty and attractive in appearance. A hostess should always be able to feel in regard to her, that she will, so far as appearance goes, be a pleasing addition to a social affair.

Then she should try to be in some way of service to her crowd. She should not merely be one of it, but add something to it. If she is musical, she should always be willing to play or sing. Or she can always have ready some good suggestion for a game or other way to pass the time. If she can't do anything else, she can stock up with a fund of good jokes or little stories, and train herself to tell them well. There are always times when they fit into the conversation, and lighten it with a note of gaiety.

These things are helps on the road to popularity. But after all, they are the superficial things. For real liking and love, one must put down some deeper foundations than these.

Study the girls in your set who are popular. Beauty of course is an aid, and likewise wealth and social position, and a home in which one can entertain delightfully. But more than these are needed for the genuine and lasting popularity that is founded on sincere regard. You will find that sunniness, good nature, a sincere desire to be of service to others, loveliness, gentleness, tenderness—all these are the things that have won popularity of the finest order.

A girl cannot build these into her character all at once. But she can make a start. She can do the little things, she can be thoughtful in little ways for her friends, for children, for old folks, that will win their regard. And she can thus build, slowly perhaps, but surely; until some day, she will have a wide circle of warm friends, friends who have a genuine liking, many a warm love, for her.

Sometimes a girl has these traits in her character, but is too shy or too reserved to show them. But she should break down these walls of reserve. Perhaps some one is longing for an expression of her love or regard, just as much as she is craving it. Think of others. Do not think of yourself. Think of giving, not of receiving. Let your heart flow out in the joy of doing, and diffidence will melt away. Whatever you recognize as your particular hindrance, go to work to overcome it.

And those who are popular should reach out a hand to those who are lonely and seemingly neglected. They can let a little of their wealth of love shine into the dreary days of those who are unloved. For this in itself will give life and strength to those who are struggling to make themselves lovable. The popular girl can take the unpopular under her wing without any loss to herself, but with the effect of making another's life bright and happy.

Thought for Today

By MRS. ROBERT M. LAFFLETTE.

RELAXATION.

FROM the beginning of life to its end, though we rest and sleep, we never completely relax until death. Yet we are ever striving toward an ideal of perfect relaxation.

We are told that it is an inevitable part of the Hindu life to retire for half an hour daily into silence, and meditate on eternal things. Every Hindu child is trained to this from an early age. Professor William James asks how many American children over hear it said by parent or teacher, that they should moderate their piercing voices, relax their unused muscles, and as far as possible, when sitting, sit quite still? Not one in thousands! Yet from its reflex influence on the inner mental states this ceaseless over-tension, over-motion, and over-expression are working on us grievous national harm.

We work with all the muscles of the body, when only the brain is needed; all the brain, when only the muscles are required, and with a running accompaniment of worry and fear that we shall not do all that we do, exactly right, or exactly on time, which disturbs all the natural functions of the body and brings on nervous prostration, and the train of ills common to modern life. I know a woman who could not take even short drives without serious fatigue, who learned to enjoy long rides of twenty or thirty miles. Her attention being directed to it, she no longer tried to help the horse by pushing with her feet, but rode peacefully, letting the horse do all the work.

The two highest manifestations of power, the two first great aims of education, physical and mental, should be concentration, the power to give the entire attention and force to one subject; and relaxation, the power of dropping work at will.

Only a Cow-Coroner.

They were discussing a United States senator who had been a railroad attorney before he became a statesman and who, many thought, had not given up his job when he assumed his toga. "It's all right," said a man who knows the senator. "He never was a railroad attorney except to go out and try damage cases. Why, all that man ever was was a cow-coroner!"

From His Own Experience.

A west end school teacher told a funny one the other day. The teacher was attempting to drill the class in the use of the word "felt." She expected some one of the children to say "The ice felt cold" or "The stove felt hot," or something of the sort. She was much discouraged when one little alien who had raised his hand to volunteer a sentence said: "I felt down stairs."—Boston Post.

HELPFUL HINTS.

When cleaning door knockers, knobs and handles of brass, dip a piece of pasteboard, an oblong with a slit in the side, around the part to be cleaned, and the woodwork around the brass will not be injured.

Beware of too long hatpins; they are dangerous, especially in a crowd. Five cents will be the cost for amputation, and it may save your neighbor the loss of an eye.

When presenting a book to another, it is not wise to write the name in it, as the friend may have a duplicate and wish to exchange it.

A candle is a nice traveling companion. When carrying bottles of liquids that are so apt to spill and spoil the very best garment, pour a little melted wax around the cork before starting on a trip.

Do not eat apples without a thorough washing. A small microscope will show a young child the reason for this precaution.

Ice cold soap suds will cause the swollen finger to give up the tight fit.

When it is necessary to drink boiled water, nerate it by pouring from one pitcher to another. This removes that flat taste.

Keep the clasp of your gold beads or pearls in front when wearing a heavy coat, as the clasp is easily pressed open and the beads are lost.

A slight rubbing with emery paper will remove the gloss that is so objectionable upon garments.

Use the old whisk broom for sink brushes.

Old pieces of flannelette make fine soft absorbent mops.

When wishing to use the sink for washing dishes, fold a cloth and lay over the drain and invert a saucepan on this. The sink will then hold the water.

Dr. Richardson's rules for old age: To eat light, nutritious food, plenty of milk and seasonable fruits and vegetables.

Eat moderately, and have a light meal before retiring.

Wear warm clothing, exercise moderately and keep active and cheerful.

Be interested in what is going on in the world. Be busy, have plenty of sleep (at least nine hours) in a well-ventilated room.

MIXING RICE AND BEANS.

"When rice and beans are eaten at the same meal, must the rice be retained in the stomach till the beans are ready to pass out?" a subscriber asks the editor of a health magazine. The answer, "Not necessarily," is necessarily incomplete and unsatisfactory to one who wishes to know whether the monodiet theory so much emphasized in these hints is as important as it must be if the arguments in its support are well founded. The correct answer to the question can be definitely determined by eating a meal of beans and rice and withdrawing the contents of the stomach two hours afterwards, when it will be found that the beans and the rice are so well mixed that to separate them would be a much greater tax upon the stomach, if that were possible, than to retain the rice three hours instead of one, whatever the effect of that may be. Scientific investigation requires reasons for all phenomena, but the practical application of the monodiet is easily determined by experience.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Attitude of Housekeeper and Domestic Science Teacher Toward Each Other.

By Alice E. Whitaker.
The average housekeeper is too busy or lacks the scientific mind essential to research work. She cannot experiment, time after time, undisturbed by failure until a point is either proven or shown to be impossible. She cannot work with microscope and thermometer to find the reason for conditions that for years have been assumed to be good but that are capable of improvement. In fact, with the family life going on about her, she cannot concentrate thought on this sort of investigation even if she had the inclination.

A great work is being done by the American Home Economics association in bringing to the attention of the housekeepers important matters that will help them in their homes. At the session last week cookery, nutrition, household chemistry, school lunch rooms, domestic art in its various phases and other good topics were considered. The speakers were college professors and teachers most of whom had marked long and seriously in the association.

A some farmers scorn the teaching of the man who does not literally do burn chores daily so there are women for instance who believe that the woman who washes dishes daily for a family must know more than a teacher.

It was not a housekeeper who discovered how bacteria developed in a neglected dish cloth or that dishes are cleaner if scalded in a ware drainer and are never touched with a dish towel.

It is true that if some housekeepers scoff at the new ideas of the teachers it is also evident that the student of the scientific side of housekeeping sometimes forgets the demands of daily life in the average home.

Sometimes a professor of domestic science advises the housekeeper to wash and scrub her garbage can twice a day and at least never full to the top at night. This is theory not likely to be practical. Few housewives will care to spend time every evening in scrubbing out a garbage can and few helpers could be induced to do so.

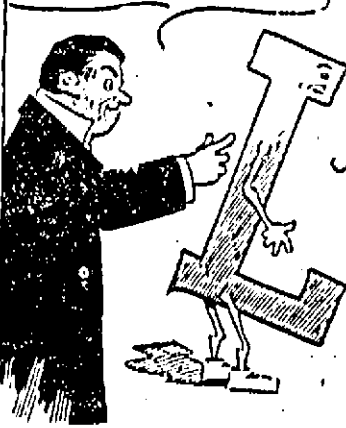

If this commendable treatment was given every other morning it would be more than most garbage cans receive and I am sure that cleaning and scrubbing once a week would be a genuine surprise to a majority of these receptacles. However the domestic science teacher does excellent work who calls attention to this important point of kitchen sanitation.

Home cooks disagree without exact reason, about different methods of bread making. In the college or university various processes are watched by an expert and the reason for certain flavors, or periods of fermentation, amount of yeast, temperature and other points are recorded for the benefit of the housewife, who should make good use of the knowledge.

If it is discovered that a traditional way of cooking an article of food brings too great loss of nutritive value the home cook, in the interests of economy and health, ought to be ready to adopt the substitute method of the domestic science teacher.

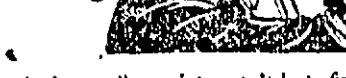

Only Needed Another.
I was walking on the beach last Sunday with my nephew, and I told him that I would give him a dollar if he could find two pebbles exactly alike. Full of gloom, John began searching. By and by he came running to me very much excited, and said: "Oh, uncle, I've found one of them."—Exchange.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven."

—Milton.

Doubtless, you have heard many times, both from other folks' pens and mine, the essential philosophy of the above.

It's the point of view that we take of our circumstances, and not the circumstances themselves, that does most to make us happy or unhappy—dissatisfied or contented. You have probably been told that again and again, and having common sense and reason of your own, know it anyway.

But let me—or rather, one of my letter-friends—present this same philosophy in a more original, newer and more concrete form. I think it will interest and amuse you, as it did me.

"My sister and I," writes this friend, "are rather imaginative, and when we have nothing else to do, we build the most wonderful air castles. Sometimes we merely draw exaggerated word pictures of little happenings. One afternoon after work we walked home, stopped on our way out for a chat with our married sister, and when we got home, found that the rest of the family had finished supper. We ate ours and repaired to the porch. I plumped down in the hammock and drew a pathetic picture of the walk up, describing the two poor stenographers toiling weary miles after a hard day's work—the tall, thin, angular, gray-haired one (my hair is gray, but prematurely so) with a half-soiled white skirt that had seen better days, and a white waist that she had spent many weary hours embroidering—the short, dragged-out-looking younger sister in a similar costume. She told how they dragged their weary footsteps to their married sister's flat, where they could smell the supper cooking for her husband when he returned from his day's labor, and after talking for awhile proceeded on their journey home. They sat down to the table and partook of a frugal supper of bread and preserves, a bit of lettuce and some lukewarm tea, and then dragging their weary feet to the porch, threw themselves down in utter exhaustion.

You must admit this tale of woe sounds heart-rending. "Then, I said: 'Now listen while I draw the other side of the picture. The two sisters, after leaving their offices, one in a bank, the other in a mercantile office, strolled up town, in the late afternoon, stopping enroute for a mass frappe at the ice cream parlor. The older sister, tall and slender with a mass of fluffy gray hair, was dressed in a dainty, well-fitting linen skirt and hand-embroidered lingerie waist. The younger one, a short, attractive blonde, was similarly dressed. As the two sisters walked they discussed intelligently Elbert Hubbard, Charles Lamb, and Robert Louis Stevenson. Enroute they stopped for a moment's chat with their married sister, who sang them an aria from one of the operas, while she awaited her husband's homecoming, in anticipation of which she had prepared a dainty supper. Upon their arrival at their own home, they sat down to a tempting supper of lettuce with mayonnaise, preserved peaches and fragrant tea (it wasn't lukewarm at all). The polished table was bare with a drawwork luncheon square, and bowl of roses, and the china was of a dainty gold and white design.

"After supper they repaired to the wide veranda with the rose vines, awnings, and rustic sofa and chairs piled with sofa pillows, and while one settled herself comfortably in the hammock, with a couple of feather pillows under her head, the other plied the settee high with pillows and curled herself up for a happy evening.

"When finished we both laughed—the pictures were so completely different, yet both were correct in the essentials. I told Jane it only shows what a point of view can do, and she admitted that she was feeling quite sorry for herself when she finished her narrative and that mine cheered her up so that she felt quite happy."

Now, all of us in our thoughts are all the time unconsciously making word pictures of everything that happens to us.

I wonder which kind of word picture you have the mental habit of making—the kind that makes you feel sorry for yourself, or the other kind?

He spoke of some of the reasons for labor's grievances and of the causes and remedies which should be applied.

He took for his text Romans 7:24: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" He spoke in part as follows: "This is the cry going up from the multitude of the laboring classes of this country today, and one of the most tragic exhibitions of this was the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times Building in 1910 causing the death of 21 people.

"Recent years have witnessed a series of dynamite explosions in which many valuable properties have been destroyed. The scenes of these disasters have been in the large cities and in the smaller towns from one end of the country to the other. W. J. Burns, one of the most noted criminal detectives was employed to ferret out the dynamiters. He had about solved the mystery and located the responsible parties when the news came of the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building. The circumstances were so much similar to other disasters of the kind, that Burns concluded that the same parties were guilty of this deed, and subsequent investigation led to the securing of evidence and the arrest of the McNamara brothers.

"The later history of the effort of the labor unions to raise funds for the defense of the indicted men is well known. Clarence Darrow, the noted Chicago criminal lawyer was engaged at an enormous figure to act as counsel for the defense. But to the surprise of everyone just as the trial was about to begin the jury not being directly selected, the brothers confessed and they received their sentences, one for life and the other for fifteen years.

"The event stands as a lesson to all agitators and reformers. Labor unions and capital alike will date new reforms, new sympathies, and new methods from the confession of the McNamara brothers. There are a few lessons we wish to draw from that event. 'God makes the wrath of man to praise him' and fire and dynamite have their lessons.

"Labor, nevertheless, has its grievance." The speaker then continued to outline some of the conditions as they exist in factories and mines, store and shop, throughout the land today. The long hours and the hard labor which some of the toilers have to experience were described. Some of the tragic stories which are common in the record of current events were related showing the terrible grinding down of human life, men, women and children, alike, which occurs in many industries.

"We can locate part of the labor trouble in the home," he said. "Extravagance, waste, bad cooking and neglect, explain part of the despair and gloom hanging over the poor and laboring classes in this country.

"When young people are married I should like to add to the usual questions which are asked the groom and the bride. To the groom: will you stay home nights? Will you supply the necessities of life? Will you run the vacuum cleaner and the washing machine? Will you save your money? Will you go to church with your wife? And I would ask the bride: Can you cook a meal? Can you make a loaf of bread as good as a made at a restaurant and Lamb's or at Colville's? Can you darn and mend? Do you like to sweep and dust and take care of the house? Will you stay home mornings in preference to gadding the streets? Will you get the meals promptly? Will you go to church with your husband? "When all these questions are answered in the affirmative we shall have new homes in America and it will be the dawning of a new day for labor.

"We know that labor has its grievances but the remedy is not in fire and dynamite. Anarchy will never win the sympathy of the country. It is work for the peace-makers. There are many remedies which have been tried: Men have organized into labor unions and have tabulated their appeals; in Milwaukee they have gone into politics and elected a Mayor and city officials and have sent a man to Congress; they have sought legislation in the state and national legislatures; they have published journals, exploiting their needs; but when they preach the gospel of the sick and danger, they shut every star of hope. Revolution by violence means ruin for the working man. There must be a peaceable settlement of all differences."

The speaker quoted from a recent article by ex-president Roosevelt which described the manner in which suffering was alleviated and labor adjustment made by co-operation and agreement following the Cherry mine disaster and he continued:

"Jesus Christ touches the brotherhood of men and anything which we do to help his body, mind and heart that I am under obligations to do it.

"The McNamara event teaches that 'man will out.' It is hard to cover up the tracks of crime, our crime hunt us and if they do escape the knowledge of the public they do not escape our conscience and the judgment of God.

"Why did the McNamara confess? Some say because the evidence was so conclusive. Others say it was to win the clemency of the court. But the truth is that they were in the shadows of the judgment. They realized as we all must, that man is to meet the fruits of his own sowing, and the terrors of an accusing conscience prompted them to confess their guilt. This, by the way, is a mighty check to crime. A statesman has said that take away the belief in immortality and it may be doubted whether free institutions would last two centuries. God is crowding the certainties of the judgment into the very bones and marrow of men."

FOLKS PAST FIFTY MUST USE CASCARETS

What Glasses, Are to Weak Eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels—a 10-cent box will truly amaze you.

Most old people, must give to the bowels some regular help, also they suffer from constipation. "The condition is perfectly natural." It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age, the bowels are less elastic. And the "bowels" are muscles.

So all old people need cascarets. One might as well refuse to let weak eyes with glasses, as neglect their bowels with Cascarets. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity, but a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

Meritol White Liniment.

Should be in every home as its immediate application to cuts, bruises, sprains and wounds gives instant relief. It has no equal as a pain killer and healer. Reliable Drug Co.

Beware of Stale News.

Because you have done it for forty years is probably the best excuse for changing your method.

THE HEAVENS IN JANUARY.

By Prof. Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.

Four Eclipses during 1912. On January 3rd our Earth will be nearer the Sun than any other time during the year.

The year 1912 will be a most interesting one to those who take pleasure in watching the face of the sky. The beautiful constellations, ever changing as the months pass away, are always with us, and these alone afford an inexhaustible field for study and exploration to one who is so fortunate as to possess a small telescope, that besides the stars and nebulae, the in the sky is almost exactly the same as that of the sun; the sun, however, appears to us as almost equal, round disc. Sometimes the moon is a little further from the earth than usual, and then it seems to be a very little smaller than the sun; at these times if our satellite happens to pass in front of the sun it will not hide the front disc completely because it is partially eclipsed on the morning of this day; to observers west of the Mississippi river, the whole eclipse will be visible.

On September 26 the moon will pass a little way into the earth's shadow—only one-tenth of the moon's surface being darkened. This eclipse will be entirely visible throughout the western part of our country; to observers in the Eastern States the moon will set while the eclipse is going on. And finally, on October 10, a second total eclipse of the sun will occur, the shadow striking the earth in the Pacific ocean, northwest of South America, sweeping entirely across that continent and across the South Atlantic ocean, and leaving the earth at a point about 160 miles south of the Cape of Good Hope, in Florida and at other points in the extreme southeast of our country this will be seen as a very small, partial eclipse, beginning just after sunrise elsewhere throughout the United States it will be wholly invisible.

THE MOTIONS OF THE PLANETS DURING 1912.

Throughout the events of January Mars and Saturn shine high in the sky in the south, while the even brighter planets, Venus and Jupiter, are both morning stars. But as the evening star, so that from this date until November 4 all three of the planets, Mars, Venus and Jupiter, will be with us.

THE EVENING AND MORNING SKIES IN JANUARY.

The evening sky is now a magnificent sight, with the wonderful Orion and the brilliant Dog Stars high in the south, the bright Capella almost exactly overhead, and the beautiful groups, Gemini and Leo, far above the ground in the east. The lower end of the Northern Cross has sunk from view in the northwest, while the Milky Way forms a golden arch that now passes over the heavens exactly through the zenith. The large nebulae at A and B, and the star clusters at E and F, Figure 1, are all most interesting objects for examination with a small telescope.

This month, too, the wonderful variable star at D will be eclipsed in the early evening no less than five times. Although this star is usually almost as bright as the nearby stars at L, yet at a constant interval of about 2 days 21 hours a darker star passes in front of the bright one, and cuts off five-sixths of its light. It has recently been discovered that the bright star and its darker companion are each about as large as our own stars and star-clouds, there will be a single night of the entire year when there will not be at least two right planets in a favorable position for observation, and during more than half the year the three brightest worlds of all will be seen shining in the evening sky. The observer who will watch these bright wanderers as they move over the heavens among the constellations, passing and re-not large enough to do so. A bright ring of the sun's disc will then be seen all around the edge of the moon. In the eclipse of April 17 the apex of the moon's shadow will first strike our turning earth at a point in Guinea in Northern South America. From here it will sweep across the Atlantic ocean, will touch Central Europe, and will finally leave the earth in Siberia, about 10 minutes months go on and our sun is apparently seen to move steadily eastward among the stars along its path, A. V. B. Figure 1, the aspect of the heavens will be changed. Thus, when on March 20, the sun reaches the point called the Vernal Equinox, which is at V, it is evident that Pisces will set immediately after sunset, and that all of the stars in this part of the sky will be invisible in the twilight glow. The planet Saturn, which is now in Aries in the position shown in Figure 1, will at this time be found a very little farther eastward among the stars than now, but as this very distant world requires 29½ years to pass once around the sky it is evident that its position will have changed but little. Consequently, when the sun arrives at V, it will have so nearly overtaken Saturn that the planet at sunset will then be seen not far from the ground in the western sky. Thus, this planet will be seen farther and farther west each evening, and finally on May 14 our sun will pass to the east of it, and it will become a morning star.

With Mars the case is somewhat different. This world is itself running so rapidly eastward among the stars that the sun cannot quickly overtake it. In fact, the Red Planet will have run through the star groups Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo and Libra—almost entirely across the summer sky—before it is lost in the rays of its pursuing sun. Mars will, therefore, remain in our evening sky until November 4, though it will grow continually fainter because its distance from us is constantly increasing.

At about the time when Saturn is disappearing, and long before Mars ceases to shine brightly in the west, the most brilliant Jupiter will enter our evening sky in the east to remain with us until it, in its turn, becomes lost in the sun's rays in November. And on July 5 the planet Venus changes from a morning to an evening star, and that the darker star revolves so near the brighter one that the side of it which is turned toward the central body is raised to incandescence by the enormous heat which it receives. The star at D will be seen to become faint on January 3 at 10 P. M., January 6 at 7 P. M., January 23 at 12 P. M., January 26 at 9 P. M., and on January 29 at 6 P. M. It requires somewhat more than four hours for the star to fade from its usual brightness to its greatest faintness.

On January 28, at 10 minutes before 9 o'clock in the evening, the moon will pass just above the planet Mars. The Red Planet will then be seen shining out almost at the moon's lower edge, almost exactly as we saw it on the evening of last December 4. To observers in Canada and other high latitudes the moon will be seen to pass in front of the planet and to hide it from view.

The early morning sky is now made very beautiful by the presence of the two bright planets Venus and Jupiter, which, during the first days of the month are drawing closely together. Figure 3 shows the appearance of the southeastern heavens at 15 minutes before 6 o'clock in the morning of January 10. Venus will then be seen a little way above the more distant planet, the two objects forming a beautiful, bright pair in the early morning sky. The swiftly-moving Mercury may also be detected low in the dawn toward the southeast, though this will be much more easily seen at the time of its greatest elongation from the sun, which will occur on January 15.

On January 3 at 6 A. M. our earth will be nearer the sun than at any other time during the year; on July 4 at 6 P. M. it will be at its greatest distance away from that body. The difference between the two distances is 3,102,000 miles.

passing one another as they go, will find the study of the highest interest.

THE ECLIPSES OF 1912. During the present year there will be no less than four eclipses—two of the sun, and two of the moon—the first one of which will, however, be wholly invisible to observers in North America. The second eclipse occurs on April 17, and is an eclipse of the sun of a most peculiar kind. The apparent size of our moon as we see it after the beginning. During nearly all of this time the moon will be so far from the earth that it cannot entirely hide the sun, but for a space of only 40 seconds, while the shadow is sweeping across the northwestern corner of Spain, the moon will be nearer and the sun will be completely hidden. Before entering France, the eclipse will change to a ring eclipse as it was at first. In the Eastern United States we will see the sun rise

UNCLE SAM'S NEW NAVAL BASE.

Rear Admiral Thomas thus realizes the dream of early navigators who nearly a century ago recognized the worth of Pearl Harbor as a base. There was a general celebration in Honolulu, including a banquet attended by Queen Liliuokalani.

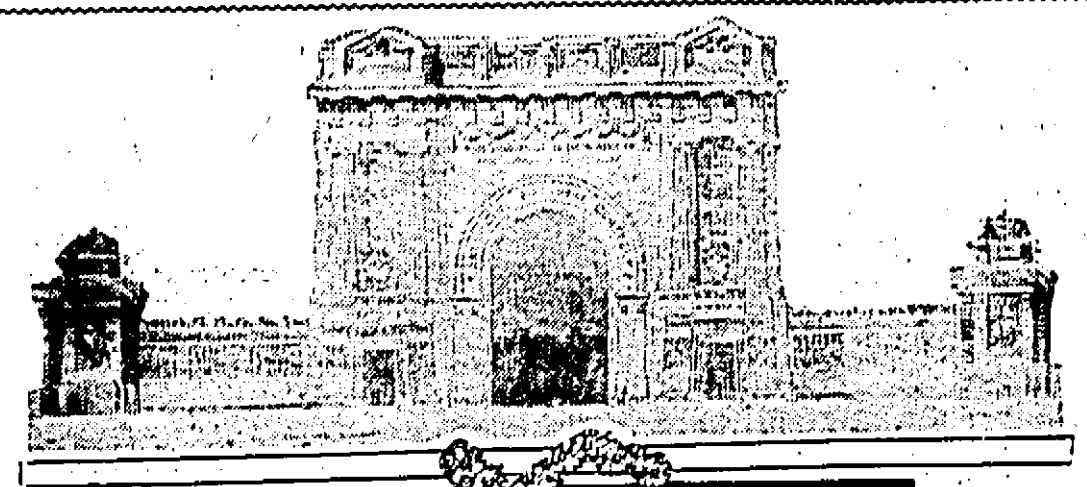

The above first photograph showing the opening of Pearl Harbor and Channel, Honolulu, to great battleships, marks one of the most important naval moves of recent years. The harbor was formally opened on December 14th after ten years of dredging between the Occident and the Orient. The ceremony of opening command of the entering and departing

UNNECESSARY BUTCHERY EX-CITES WORLD POWERS.

London, England.—The almost unprecedented spectacle of a Christian nation in this enlightened age ruthlessly and needlessly murdering Persian women and children has brought upon the Czar of Russia the contempt of the entire world. Hitherto, indeed, is the riot of Russian soldiers in their desire for innocent blood, Persia undoubtedly has offended Russia, but after conceding to Russia's ultimatum, the reward is the butchery of their wives, sweethearts and children.

The Shuster incident is of course, only a pretext for Russia to speak Persia a lesson which Russia hopes will prevent any further "indiscretions."

attempts on the part of Persia to in the least manifest her own desire for some little semblance of local government. Russia intends to dominate Persia and wants it to be understood finally in just that way.

Asiatic countries remains a question to be determined within the next five years.

It is very evident that if they do not intend to sit peacefully by, Russia will be forced into a fight in which who is little prepared to successfully contend. One concerted effort on the part of the world powers could undoubtedly stop forever the greed of Russia and the barbaric methods employed by her in whipping into subjugation the smaller powers.

FRECKLES

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

The angel's face wore an unusual flush. Her eyes were flashing, and she was palpitating with earnestness. She parted the bushes and disappeared. Freckles, straight as a young pine and with the tenseness of a war horse scenting battle, stood waiting. Presently, before he saw she was there, she was coming down the aisle toward him, playing compellingly, and rifts of light were touching her with golden glory. Freckles stood as if transfixed.

The blood roiled in his veins. The cathedral was majestically beautiful, from arched dome of frescoed gold, green and blue in never ending shades and harmonies to the mosaic also that trod, richly lulled in choicest colors and gigantic pillars that were God's handiwork fashioned and perfected down through ages of sunshine and rain. But the fair young face and divinely molded form of the angel were his most perfect work of art. Never had she looked so surprisingly beautiful.

She was smiling encouragingly now, and as she came toward him she struck the chords full and strong. The chords of poor Freckles almost burst with dull pain and his great love for her. In his desire to fulfill her expectations he forgot everything else, and when she reached his initial chord he was ready. He literally burst forth:

"Three little leaves of Irish green,
United on one stem.
Love, truth and valor do they mean.
They form a magic gem."

The angel's eyes widened curiously, and her lips fell apart. A heavier color swept into her cheeks. She had intended to arouse him. She had succeeded with a vengeance. She was too young to know that in the effort to rouse a man women frequently kindle fires that they can neither quench nor control. Freckles was looking out over her head now and singing that song as it had never been sung before for her alone, and instead of her helping him, as she had intended, he was carrying her with him on the waves of his voice away, away into a world she knew not of. When he struck into the chorus, wide eyed and panting, she was swaying toward him and playing for dear life to keep up.

"Oh, do you love? Oh, say you love, you love the shamrock green?"

At the last note Freckles' voice died away and his eyes fastened on the angel's. He had given his best and his all. He fell on his knees and folded his arms across his breast. The angel, as if magnetized, walked straight down the aisle to him and, running her fingers into the crisp masses of his red hair, tilted his head back and laid her lips on his forehead.

Then she stepped back and faced him. "Good boy!" she said in a voice that wavered from the throbbing of her shaken heart. "Dear boy! I knew you could do it! I knew it was in you! Freckles, when you go out into the world, if you can face a great audience and sing like that, just once, you will be immortal, and anything you want will be yours."

"Anything?" gasped Freckles. "Anything," said the angel. Freckles found his feet, muttered something and, catching up his old bucket, plunged into the swamp blindfold on a pretense of getting water. The angel walked slowly across the study and sat down on the rustic bench and through narrowed lids intently studied the tip of her shoe.

CHAPTER XIII.

FRECKLES' BUTTERFLIES.

OUT on the trail the Bird Woman wheeled on McLean with a dumfounded look. "Do you think the angel knew she did that?" she asked softly. "No," said McLean. "I do not. But the poor boy knew it. Heaven help him!"

The Bird Woman stared across the gently waving swale. "I don't see how I am going to blame her," she said at last. "It's so exactly what I would have done myself."

"Say the best," demanded McLean hoarsely. "Do him justice!" "He is a born gentleman," conceded the Bird Woman. "He took no advantage. He never even offered to touch her. Whatever that kiss meant to him, he recognized it was the loving impulse of a child under stress of strong emotion. He was fine and manly as any man ever could have been."

McLean lifted his hat. "Thank you," he said simply and parted the bushes for her to enter Freckles' room.

It was her first visit, and before she left she sent for her cameras and made studies of each side of it and of the cathedral. She was entranced with the delicate beauty of the place, and her eyes kept following Freckles as if she could not believe that it could be his conception and work.

That was a happy day. The Bird Woman had brought a lunch, and they spread it, with Freckles' dinner, on the study floor and sat about, resting and enjoying themselves. But the angel put her hands into his case, silently gathered up her music, and no one mentioned the concert.

The Bird Woman left McLean and the angel to clear away the lunch and with Freckles examined the walls of his room and told him all she knew about his shrubs and flowers. She analyzed a cardinal flower and showed him what he had all summer wanted to know—why the bees buzzed incessantly about it with the humming birds found in it an ever ready feast. Some of his specimens were so rare that she was unfamiliar with them, and with the flower book between them they knelt, studying the different varieties. She wandered the length of the cathedral aisle with him, and it was at her suggestion that he lighted his altar with a row of flaming foxgloves.

As Freckles came up to the cabin from his long day at the swamp he saw Mrs. Chicken sweeping away to the south and wondered where she was going. He stepped into the bright, cozy little kitchen, and as he reached down the wash basin he asked Mrs. Duncan a question.

"Mother Duncan, do kisses wash off?"

"Lord, no, Freckles," she cried. "At least the ones you get from people you love. They'll wash off the outside. They strike in until they find the center of your heart and make their stopping place there, and nothing can take them from you—I don't think even death. No, lad, you can be sure kisses wash off."

Freckles set the basin down and muttered, "I needn't be afraid to be washed, then, for that one struck in."

"I wish," said Freckles at breakfast one morning, "that I had some way to be sending a message to the Bird Woman. I've something down at the swamp that I'm believing never happened before, and surely she'll be wanting to know it."

"What now, Freckles?" asked Mrs. Duncan. "Why, the oddest thing you ever heard of," said Freckles. "The whole insect tribe gone on a spree. I'm supposing it's my fault, but it all happened by accident-like. You see, on the swale side of the line, right against me trail, there's one of these scrub wild crab trees. Where the grass grows thick about it is the finest place you ever conceived of for snakes. Having women about has set me trying to clean out those fellows a bit, and yesterday I noticed that tree in passing. It struck me that it would be a good idea to be taking it out. First I thought I'd take me hatchet and cut it down, for it ain't thicker than my upper arm. Then I remembered how it was blooming in the spring and filling all the air with sweetness. The coloring of the blossoms is beautiful, and I hated to be killing it. I just cut the grass short all about it. Then I started at the ground, trimmed up the trunk near the height of my shoulder and left the top spreading. That made it look so truly ornamental that, like like, I chips off the rough places next, and this morning, on me soul, it's a sight. You see, cutting off the limbs and trimming up the trunk sets the sap running. In this hot sun it ferments in a few hours. There isn't much room for more things to crowd on that tree than there are, and to get drunker isn't always possible."

"Well, I be drawn out!" exclaimed Mrs. Duncan. "What kind of things do you mean, Freckles?" "Why, just an army of black ants. Some of them are sucking away like old toppers. Some of them are settling up on their tails and hind legs, falling away with their fore feet and wiping their eyes. Some are rolling around on the ground, contented. There are quantities of big bluebeetles flitting over the bark and hanging on the grass, about, too drunk to stow a conscience sting, so they just buzz away like flying and all the time sitting still. The snake feeders are too full to feed anything, even more sap to themselves. There's a lot of hard backed bugs—beetles, I guess—colored like the brown, blue and black of a peacock's tail. They hang on until the legs of them are so weak they can't stick a minute longer, and then they break away and fall to the ground. They just lay there on their backs, fably clawing air. When it wears off a bit, up they get and go crawling back for more, and they so full they bump into each other and roll over. Sometimes they can't climb the tree until they wait to sober up a little. There's a lot of big black and gold bumblebees, done for entire, stumbling over the bark and rolling on the ground. They just lay there on their backs, rocking from side to side, singing to themselves like fat, happy babies. The wild bees keep up a steady buzzing with the beating of their wings.

"The butterflies are the worst old toppers of them all. They're just a circus! You never saw the best of the beauties! They come every color you could be thinking up. They drink and drink until I'm driving them away they stagger as they fly and turn somersaults in the air. If I have them alone they cling to the grasses, silvering happy-like, and I'm best, Mother Duncan, if the best of them could be unlocking the front door with a lead pencil, even."

"I never heard of anything so surprising," said Mrs. Duncan. "It's a rare sight to watch them, and no one ever made a picture of a thing like that before. I'm for thinking," said Freckles earnestly.

"No," said Mrs. Duncan. "You can be pretty sure there didn't. The Bird Woman must have word in some way if you walk the line and I walk to town and tell her."

Freckles took his lunch and went down to the swamp. He could find no trace of anything, yet he felt a tense nervousness, as if trouble might be brooding. He came around to his room and cautiously scanned the entrance before he stepped in. Then he pushed the bushes apart with his right arm and entered, his left hand on the butt of his favorite revolver. Instantly he knew that some one had been there. He could find no trace of a clew to confirm his belief, yet so intimate was he with the spirit of the place that he knew.

He was most sure about the case. Nothing was disturbed, yet it seemed to Freckles that he could see where prying fingers had tried the lock. He stepped back of the case, carefully examining the ground all about it, and close by the tree to which it was nailed he found a deep, fresh footprint in the spongy soil—a long, narrow print, that was never made by the foot of a creature. The feeling rose that he was being watched.

Growing restive at last under the strain, he plunged boldly into the swamp and searched minutely all about his room, but he could not discover the least thing to give him further cause for alarm. Every rod he traveled he used the caution that sprang from knowledge of danger and the direction from which it would probably come. Several times he thought of sending for McLean, but for his life he could not make up his mind to do it with nothing more tangible than one footprint to justify him.

He waited until he was sure Duncan would be at home, if he were coming for the night, before he went up to supper. The first thing he saw as he crossed the swale was the big days in the yard.

"There had been no one passing that day, and Duncan readily agreed to watch until Freckles rode to town. He told Duncan of the footprint and urged him to watch closely. Duncan said he might rest easy and, filling his pipe and taking a good revolver, went down to the lumberlot.

Freckles made himself clean and neat and raced for town, but it was night and the stars were shining before he reached the home of the Bird Woman. As he neared the steps he saw that the place was swarming with young people, and the angel, with an exclamation to a group that surrounded her, came scurrying up to him.

"Oh, Freckles!" she cried. "So you could get off? We were so afraid you could not. I'm as glad as I can be."

"I don't understand," said Freckles. "Were you expecting me?" "Why, of course," exclaimed the angel. "Haven't you come to my party? Didn't you get my invitation? I sent you one."

"By mail?" asked Freckles. "Yes," said the angel. "I had to help with the preparations, and I couldn't find time to drive out. But I wrote you a letter and told you that the Bird Woman was giving a party for me and we wanted you to come sure. I told them at the office to put it with Mr. Duncan's mail."

"Then that's likely where it is at present," said Freckles. "Duncan only comes to town once a week and at times not that. He's home tonight for the first in a week. He's watching an hour for me until I was coming to the Bird Woman with a bit of work I thought she'd be caring to hear about. Is she where I can see her?"

"The angel's face clouded. 'What a disappointment!' she cried. 'I did so want all my friends to know you. Can't you stay anyway?' Freckles glanced from his wading boots to the patent leathers of some of the angel's friends near by and smiled whimsically, but there was no danger of his over misjudging her again.

"You know I cannot, angel," he said. "I am afraid I do," she said ruefully. "It's too bad. But there is a thing I want for you more than to come to my party, and that is to hang on and win with your work. I think of you every day, and I just pray that those thieves are not getting ahead of you. Oh, Freckles, do watch closely!"

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

WHEN WASHINGTON WENT WOOLING.

By A. W. MACY.

George Washington was a hustler, even in matrimonial affairs. When a young man of twenty-six he took dinner at the house of a friend one day, and there met a good-looking young widow named Martha Custis. She must have been charming, for George spent the whole afternoon in her society, and then accepted her invitation to remain to tea. It was evidently a case of ardent love at first sight, for bright and early next morning he was again at the front door, asking admission. Before noon that day they were engaged to be married, and married they were, shortly afterward, she "in silk and satin, lace and brocade, with pearls on her neck and in her ears," and he "in blue and silver trimmed with scarlet, and with gold buckles at his knees and c. his shoes." After the wedding ceremony, which no doubt was highly impressive, they rode away to Mount Vernon, not together in the same carriage as bridal couples do now, but she in a "coach and six," and he on horseback, riding proudly alongside.

Wake Up With a 'Dark Brown Taste?'

Get Rid of It—Run for OLIVE TABLETS

There isn't the slightest need to wake up any morning with a "brown mouth." Ugh! No need to describe it! Dr. Edwards has made "brown mouth" a thing of the past in thousands of homes with his little Olive Tablets, the substitute for cologne.

Anyone who takes Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets the moment he suspects his liver and bowels never has a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a plumpy face, constipation or any other form of bowel or liver disorder. Take one just the moment you suspect you are constipated or that your liver is out of order.

Thousands take one at bedtime every night just to keep the bowels regular, the liver in order, the mouth clean and the breath pure and sweet.

Olive Tablets are made of pure vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil.

Dr. Edwards spent 17 years in practice and in laboratory experiments before he perfected Olive Tablets. Why don't you try them instead of the severe kind of laxatives that grip and only effect temporary relief?

Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own. One and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company of Columbus, O. Dr. F. M. Edwards, President.

CROP IMPROVEMENT COMMITTEE GRAIN EXCHANGES

Of Interest to Every Farmer

The day of scientific farming is no longer a dream of the future. It is here, and an effort is being made to give Rock County farmers the benefit of much useful knowledge concerning soil conditions, good seed and many other things which insure increase in crop production.

The State Agricultural College and the Grain Exchanges referred to in a recent article in the Gazette are important factors in this broad and helpful movement. They desire certain reports at this time on a few great cereal crops—corn, oats and barley—from every farm in Rock County. If possible, these reports are to be used to help in introducing better soil conditions, better and more productive seed, and greater yields per acre. A demonstration car will be in Janesville on Thursday, January 18th, C. M. & St. P. Ry., to make an exhibit along these lines.

Every teacher and every family can help to make this movement of greater value to the county, by helping to get these reports. The Gazette is furnishing means to do this, and several blanks are sent to each school in the county. The teachers are asked to tell their scholars of the importance of this movement, and to send a blank by the pupils to each family on a farm in their respective districts. The farmers are requested to fill out each blank carefully and send it back to the teacher, who is asked to send the papers so collected on or before January 13th to the Janesville Gazette. (Instructions can be cut off before blanks are sent to the Gazette, to save postage.)

Your county superintendent requests this as one way in which you can make the influence of your school broader and more beneficial to your district. This study of farm conditions, and this co-operation of parents, pupils and teachers, will be one more step forward for our great agricultural county. Therefore let us do this work with vigor, enthusiasm and promptness.

This is the first step toward organization. If you render hearty co-operation the movement will be a success, and bumper crops will follow.

NOTE: A copy of this entire article with sufficient blanks for every district school and every scholar in being sent direct to each teacher in Rock County. It is the desire that one blank only of each form be filled out by each farmer and sent to the Gazette at once. This means a movement to help the grower produce more bushels of grain and is vital to his interests. Therefore, please give careful attention.

O. D. ANTISDEL, County Supt.

ARMY POSTS MUST GO.

Washington, D. C.—The first move toward the abandonment of a large number of army posts was taken by the House in adopting the Bulkeley resolution asking the Secretary of War to furnish Congress with detailed information regarding the distribution of the army and of the practicability of abandoning some of the posts.

Chairman Hinds of the committee investigating the war department told the House that millions could be saved by concentration. Major General Leonard Wood, chief of the staff, furnished the information that the department is now working out a plan for the concentration of the army. Congressman Robert J. Bulkeley and Congressman Asher Hinds are two members of the committee who are active in urging concentration.
